GOP challenges president on mosque debate

CNN

Republicans tried mightily Sunday to make a political flash point out of President Obama’s defense of plans to build an Islamic center and mosque near ground zero in New York.

On talk shows spanning the network and cable spectrum, GOP politicians and pundits insisted that Obama was insensitive to those who lost loved ones in the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks when he entered the debate on the issue with a White House speech marking the start of Ramadan, the Islamic holy month.

Some predicted political repercussions for Democrats in November’s congressional election, even though they agreed with Obama that freedom of religion is a vital part of American democracy.

Republican strategist Ed Rollins, a senior political contributor to CNN, summed up the GOP perspective.

“Intellectually, the president may be right, but this is an emotional issue, and people who lost kids, brothers, sisters, fathers, what have you, do not want that mosque in New York, and it’s going to be a big, big issue for Democrats across this country,” Rollins said on the CBS program “Face the Nation.”

On the same program, Democratic National Committee Chairman Tim Kaine challenged the Re-

STAT SNAPSHOT

Nearly 70 percent of Americans oppose the plan to build a $100 million, 13-story facility called Cordoba House two blocks from the site of the 9/11 attacks, according to a CNN/Opinion Research Corporation Poll released Wednesday. The developer, Sharif el-Gamal, describes the project as an Islamic community center that would include a 500-seat performing arts center, a lecture hall, a swimming pool, a gym, a culinary school, a restaurant and a prayer space for Muslims.

publican logic.

“You know, we see an awful lot of Republicans going out and saying we’ve got to respect the Constitution, and that means we have to respect it,” Kaine said. “We can’t tarnish people’s First Amendment rights.”

In his speech at the White House dinner Friday, Obama said Muslims “have the same right to practice their religion as anyone else in this country.”

“That includes the right to build a place of worship and a community center on private property in lower Manhattan, in accordance with local laws and ordinances,” the president added.

Poll: Chicago split on legalizing gay marriage

Chicago Tribune

Robert Young has a clear opinion on whether same-sex marriages should be legalized in Illinois, or anywhere else: “I think it’s wrong, but I don’t want to force my morality on other people. I think that’s not my position to judge. That’s somebody else’s job.”

Young, of Oak Lawn, says his opinions on homosexuality are grounded in his Christian faith, but his willingness to support gay marriage puts him in the minority among Chicago-area suburbanites. In a recent Tribune/WGN poll, 46 percent of suburban residents said they oppose legalizing same-sex marriage, while 40 percent approve and 14 percent have no opinion.

When asked their opinions on civil unions—which would provide same-sex couples with many of the same legal rights as marriage—the results switch: 54 percent of suburban residents favor legalizing same-sex civil unions, compared with 33 percent who would oppose such a law. When city residents are included, the results remain nearly the same.

The poll shows that the Chicago area falls largely in line with national opinions on gay marriage, an issue that has received considerable attention lately after a federal judge in California declared that state’s ban on gay marriage unconstitutional. Same-sex marriages may resume soon in California, and the judge’s decision is expected to make its way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The overall opinion on legalizing same-sex marriage, when city respondents are factored in, is split: 42 percent oppose it, 42 percent support it and 15 percent have no opinion. The Market Shares Corp. telephone poll of 800 male and female heads of household from the six-county Chicago area has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

Giving religious tolerance a test

Intolerance is such a funny thing because people generally are tolerant right up until the moment something frightens or inconveniences them.

I'm staying in New York, where the controversy over building the Cordoba House, an Islamic center near ground zero, recently got even more interesting when conservative pundit Greg Gutfeld said he'd lined up investors to open a gay bar nearby. The bar would include a Muslim-friendly floor without alcohol and remain open 24 hours "to accommodate men who would rather keep their sexuality under wraps—but still want to dance." Gutfeld said he wants to know if the "Mosque-teers," as he calls them, would welcome his Islamic gay bar next to their center.

It's an inspired idea, but it says more about the paradox of "religious tolerance"—be it Christian, Jew or Muslim—than it does about Islam specifically.

Religious tolerance is tricky because any religion, by its very nature, is an exercise in intolerance. For instance, they all are less than tolerant of me just because I find it highly improbable that there's a man in the sky who watches me all the time to determine whether I should be eternally punished or rewarded (and rewarded in a way that sounds much less interesting than what I do on any given Saturday night).

Islam isn't the only faith guilty of asking for the acceptance it will not provide others, but it makes for the easiest example.

Because the only thing sillier than stirring up Islamophobia over a mosque in a city teeming with Muslims who contribute to its economy, vibrancy and go-along, get-along attitude is threatening to kill someone for drawing a picture.

Obviously, I refer to the fact that I might one day write the word "Muhammad" and then get bored and doodle a snowman in the margin without thinking.

I wish that in 2006 when the Danish cartoon controversy raged over the depiction of the Prophet, the American media had not cowered in abject fear and had reprinted the cartoon in every possible venue. Then we wouldn't have to fear for the creators of "South Park." Believe me, I would do something about this myself, but I enjoy my soft organs too much.

That's why opening a gay bar by an Islamic center is sooo fair game.

I believe quite passionately in religious pluralism, that calling the U.S. a "Christian nation" is tantamount to the same kind of religious bigotry many of our ancestors fled Europe for in the first place and that Muslims have as much of a right to build mosques in their communities as Methodists have to build churches in theirs.

But if that's the case, and we are to tolerate all faiths—which I want to do because they're all full of really nice people, many of whom I'm related to or friends with ("Hi, guys!")—then religions have to learn the lesson as well and stop demonizing other groups (especially gays and lesbians) out of fear or jealousy or for political gain.

Rescue workers look after accident victims in May after a CTA bus crashed into a school on West Chicago Avenue. TRIBUNE FILE

CTA's collision course

Agency averages about 1 accident a day—but its record is improving

Chicago Tribune

CTA buses have slammed into light poles, viaducts and bus shelters. Even a house took a direct hit, damaged so severely that it had to be demolished.

The CTA bus fleet logged more than 9.3 million runs last year, and not without a scratch.

CTA buses have been involved in more collisions annually since 2008 than buses operated by the nine other largest public bus systems in the U.S., according to records compiled for the Tribune by the Federal Transit Administration. The accident rate reflects a bus incident occurring almost every day on average.

But the number of CTA bus runs between collisions has increased in the past four years, indicating that drivers are logging more miles between accidents. On average, one crash occurred for every 34,566 trips made last year, marking a 9 percent improvement over 2008, CTA officials said.

CTA management, while not satisfied that everything possible is being done to avoid accidents, attributes the improvement in the collision rate to a renewed focus on defensive-driving techniques and the use of technology, including 18 bus simulators deployed at CTA garages.

Drivers also must undergo recertification every two years, and bus operators are required to attend a retraining course if they are involved in accidents or receive tickets for moving violations.

Despite the ramped-up efforts, the CTA has been stuck in the middle of the pack—placing fourth, fifth or sixth in federal collision-rate rankings since 2002 compared with other large bus transit agencies.

Last year, there were 271 “reportable collisions” involving CTA buses, according to records. But those only are the accidents resulting in $25,000 or more in property damage or at least one individual taken to a hospital, which is the criteria set by the FTA. In 2008, CTA buses were involved in 303 reportable collisions.

The CTA bus driver who crashed into the brick house in Morgan Park in November was cited by police for negligence. The driver lost control of the bus while making a left turn, authorities said.

Four people on the bus were injured, and the house, which sustained severe structural damage, had to be demolished. Property damage totaled $200,000, officials said.

Race crash kills eight

6 Authorities said eight people were killed and dozens injured when a driver racing in the California 200 desert race in Lucerne Valley, Calif., lost control of his off-roader, which went airborne and landed on top of spectators Saturday.

"He got airborne and, when he landed, rolled over straight into the spectators," said Officer Joaquin Zubieta of the California Highway Patrol, the agency investigating the deadly crash. "People didn't have much of a chance ... to get out of the way."

Six spectators died at the scene. Nine others were airlifted to local hospitals, two of whom died later in the evening, Zubieta said.

No charges have been filed against the off-road racer, whose identity had not been released by authorities late Sunday. The driver had to be escorted away from the area after the crowd "started to get rowdy. People were upset," Zubieta said.

The ages of those killed ranged from early 20s to late 40s. The names were withheld pending positive identification and notification of family.

The 200-mile race, held on desolate Soggy Dry Lake on federal desert land just east of the San Bernardino Mountains, was sanctioned by Mojave Desert Racing and was part of a seven-race circuit. Off-road racers race around the 50-mile-long loop four times and hit speeds topping 60 mph.

The white truck that plowed into the crowd remained at the scene, upside down, into the early-morning hours as CHP investigators crawled over the vehicle to search for any mechanical defects and to try to re-create the collision.

Officers continued to interview witnesses, competitors and race officials well into the early-morning hours. Racing officials declined to comment about the incident.

Tequila hit with rocks at juggalos festival

8 Reality TV star Tila Tequila suffered facial cuts when she was pelted with rocks and bottles while performing at a music festival in Illinois on Saturday, according to a witness and a law enforcement official.

Tequila, a Playboy model who also sings, tweeted that she would sue the festival, which is organized for Insane Clown Posse fans. "Pretty soon, the owners who run the juggalos will be bankrupt," she tweeted.

The fans are mostly young people who sometimes wear clown makeup and are referred to as juggalos and juggalettes.

Festival organizers did not immediately respond to CNN requests for a response.

Bears lose 25-10

Offense sputters, starting defensive unit gives up a touchdown.

Best-case scenario:

Everyone was shaking off rust, getting used to the new Mike Martz offense and new defensive coordinator Rod Marinelli.

Worst-case scenario:

The Martz offense won't work with no true No. 1 wide receiver in Chicago, the offensive line woes of last season will return and spending all that money and draft picks on the defense backfired.

Jay Cutler's performance

Coming off a career-worst season last year, Cutler went 2-for-2 for 47 yards.

Best-case scenario: He's going to complete every pass this year, especially if Johnny Knox stays healthy. Knox caught both of Cutler's passes Saturday.

Worst-case scenario: The Cutler-led offense managed only a field goal. Look for a lot of losses with the Bears scoring just seven or 10 points. Ugh.

Matt Forte's return from injury

Forte was slowed by leg injuries last season, so he's under the microscope. He ran for 7 yards on four carries.

Best-case scenario: Forte will be the workhorse this season, taking pressure off Cutler and becoming the Marshall Faulk of the Martz offense.

Worst-case scenario: Of the seven Bears who carried the ball Saturday, Forte had the shortest longest gainer—a 2-yard carry, reminding us a lot of last year. Let's hope Chester Taylor is up to the challenge.

Julius Peppers' debut

The Bears' big offseason acquisition didn't show up on the stat sheet.

Best-case scenario: He needs to get a feel for his new teammates and a new system.

Worst-case scenario: A waste of $91.5 million.

Bear shrug

Think a preseason opener is meaningless? It's never too early to panic in this town

RedEye

The day we've all been waiting for since January has finally arrived. The Bears, and the rest of the NFL, returned to action this past week.

For Bears fans, Saturday's preseason opener in San Diego was a chance—a brief one, sure—to see how the offseason treated their favorite team.

It's hard to draw any sort of conclusion from one game—a preseason game no less—but that won't stop us from trying. Here's RedEye's look at some key developments in Saturday's game and what they could mean for the coming season.

1 What's your knee-jerk overreaction to Saturday's Bears game?	Major Wright is just the opposite of Lovie Smith, who's General(Iy) Wrong.	Ahem OHMIGODeveryon egothurtwhatarewegoingto-dooohgeez1-15herewecome!	"We're doomed!"	Would wondering if Mike Martz is pregnant be classified as a jerky overreaction?	Well, my knee jerked so hard I busted my flat-screen TV. First casualty of the season.
2 What did the first weekend of NFL preseason action tell you?	Lot of has-been QBs out there: Rex Grossman, Byron Leftwich, Matt Leinart in another year or two ...	That I don't like seeing NFL players who were born after me. Quarter-life crisis FTW!	"This little one's not worth the effort."	Former Chicagoans McNabb and Grossman already are having better years in D.C. than Chicagoan Obama.	That I still don't like NFL preseason games.
3 The three games in Minnesota this week give the White Sox ...	... a glimmer of nope.	... the same thing I got: the heebie-jeebies. BTW, where does the term "heebie-jeebies" even come from?	"... the ultimate power in the universe."	... a chance to play in front of a sellout. Where've you been, Sox fans?	... three final nails in their coffins.
4 What would it take for Cubs fans to support the Sox as they play for a postseason berth?	Make their only other choice be supporting "Lottery Ticket" this weekend.	Not much, I'm guessing. Look how quickly a lot of them became Blackhawks fans. Yeah, I said it.	"Who's the more foolish: The fool, or the fool who follows him?"	Troughs in the bathrooms. For men and women.	Does the Cell sell beer? Good enough for them then.
5 We learned over the weekend Patrick Kane reads the "Twilight" books. What's that say about him?	Limo ride shirtlessness + Taylor Lautner shirtlessness = Kaner's a werewolf!	Loss.	"You will never find a more wretched hive of scum and villainy."	You misquoted him. He's reading the cocktail menu at twilight. This continues through dawn.	That he can read while bonging a beer. It's harder than it sounds.

Right now,
moment is changing a life.

Right now, you could love your job more than ever.

Suffering Sox

Team limps into crucial showdown with Minnesota

The once smooth-running White Sox machine goes dragging into Minnesota on Tuesday with the pistons clanking and two tires blown in two days.

In other words, they need a fix-it, quickly, if they hope to exit on the other side with any hopes of continuing their Central Division title journey.

Last time they faced Minnesota, which was less than a week ago, the Sox were tied for first place.

This time they will be three games behind, thanks to a crushing 13-8 loss Sunday that capped a 2-4 home stand against the Twins and Detroit.

"A very bad home stand, terrible," manager Ozzie Guillen said.

"Hopefully we can go up there and win three games, but we have to play better, not perfect, but better to beat Minnesota," said Sunday starter Freddy Garcia, who certainly has to pitch better than he has the past two times out against the Twins and Tigers (11 runs in 7 1/3 innings).

Garcia is 1-2 with an 8.44 ERA in his past five starts.

But despite Garcia, the Sox could have won Sunday if not for a second straight blown save by J.J. Putz, this one in the eighth inning when a 7-6 lead melted down into a 9-7 deficit.

"He's thrown the ball well all year long. I'm not going to give up on him. I don't give up on too many people that easy," Guillen said when asked if he still had confidence in the veteran reliever.

CUBS 9, ST. LOUIS 7

Helping deny the St. Louis Cardinals a postseason berth would be small consolation for the 2010 Cubs, but it's something to shoot for in this lost season, if only to appease their battered fan base.

Although beating their archrivals two of three games in mid-August may not provide the same kind of drama as a playoff race, it'll have to do for the time being.

The Cubs nearly blew a seven-run lead on Sunday before outlasting St. Louis 9-7, winning a series for the first time since July 23-25, when they beat the Cardinals two of three at Wrigley Field.

"Just playing good baseball against a good team means something," winning pitcher Ryan Dempster said.

FINAL SCORE

» USSSA Price 4, Bandits 0

» Kevin Harvick wins NASCAR Sprint Cup race at Michigan International Speedway.

» Martin Kaymer wins PGA Championship.

What's in a name? 4 stories behind the names of 4 new spots

By Evan Thorne

Who is Gunner of Gunner's in Bucktown? Or Jimmy Green of Jimmy Green's in the South Loop? As more spots open with people's names on their signs, we couldn't help but wonder: Who are these people? We asked around. ... And Gunner isn't who you think he is.

METROMIX FILE

	Gunner's 1467 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-360-7650	Jimmy Green's 825 S. State St. 312-386-9000	Mac and Min's 1045 W. Madison St. 312-563-1008	Declan's Irish Pub 1240 N. Wells St. 312-642-5522
THE PLACE	A laid-back Bucktown bar serving stiff cocktails from co-owners and brothers Eric and Dan Palm, veterans of the Matchbox and the Silver Palm.	A South Loop sports bar dedicated to Chicago teams and serving bar food and more than 50 beers.	A New Orleans-themed sandwich spot in the West Loop serving 20-plus po' boys and other NOLA classics.	An Old Town pub serving Irish brews and classic bar food. If you're a stickler for character, the 140-year-old bar should do the trick.
THE NAME	Gunner is Eric Palm's father-in-law's horse. "The fact that Gunner was this big, muscular workhorse gives the name another connotation, which I kind of like," Palm says.	Jimmy Green's was an old-time tavern on Taylor Street in Little Italy where a lot of locals used to hang out.	According to manager Stephanie Gerenraich, the "fake" answer is that Mac and Min are owners Mark Bires and Mindy Friedler. In reality, however, no one calls Mark "Mac."	Owner Declan Morgan gave the bar his own name. "Declan" is an Irish name meaning "full of goodness."
THE HISTORY	When the brothers decided to open a bar, they figured a play on their last name was too generic. Eric remembered his wife's father's horse, and it was an instant success. 	"When a bunch of guys from Taylor Street are opening a place in the South Loop, what better name could we choose?" co-owner Jeff Terrana says.	Mac and Min's used to be Jerry's sandwich shop, named after Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia. When Bires and Friedler adopted the new menu, they changed the name to honor New Orleans jazz musician Malcolm John "Mac" Rebennack Jr., better known as Dr. John.	Morgan came to Chicago from Belfast in 1993 with $160 in his pocket and started working building bars. Since then, he's worked on dozens of local spots, taking his inspiration from the Crown Bar in Belfast.
THE DISH	"He probably wouldn't want the Gunner Burger ($5). Since it's named after him, he might get creeped out. But you know what, it's not made from horse, it's made from beef, so he probably wouldn't mind. In fact, he might like it."	Terrana thinks Jimmy, the owner of the now-gone Jimmy Green's, likely was a man of simple tastes. "He'd probably order either a pizza and a beer, or a burger and a beer, or an Italian beef sandwich, one of our specialties. And a beer."	Mark's go-to dish is the muffuletta ($7.45 quarter sandwich, $12.95 half, $24.95 whole), while Mindy opts for a blackened chicken po' boy ($7.45 small, $12.45 large). If Dr. John should stop in for a bite, Gerenraich imagines he'd order the shrimp and oyster po' boy ($8.45 small, $14.95 large). 	The menu uses Morgan's mother's recipe for fish and chips ($12), so he can enjoy food from his childhood anytime.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Leo

July 23-Aug. 22
A whimsical sun is inspiring you to do something wacky. You'll rent billboard space on a sheep and create a banner for it that says "Will you marry me?" Then you'll take your honey out for a casual drive in the country to admire some farms.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Just when a relationship was gaining momentum, things begin to slow down. You were ready to have your boyfriend's triplets, but now he wants to date other people. You were prepared to elope with your girlfriend, but now she wants to tour Africa. By herself. For three months.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

With Mars in your sign, you're full of initiative. You're calling up gorgeous guys and asking them out instead of waiting for Mr. Right to find you. You're making bold predictions about your future net worth even though you're wondering how you'll pay this month's rent.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You're feeling shy, and you're considering withdrawing to your cave of loneliness. Sometimes, humanity gets to you and you need to be a hermit. The moon guarantees that this is a temporary phase, so don't join a monastery just yet.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A business situation is taking off in a wonderful way, and you need to focus most of your attention on work stuff. Meanwhile, your honey is acting clingy. The moon says shake off him or her so you can concentrate on important opportunities.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Melodrama will strike this week, courtesy of the sun. Your girlfriend's biker boyfriend will turn up unexpectedly, wondering why you've been staying overnight with his girl. Your guy's mother will tell you to your face that you're not good enough for her son. Ouch!

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Things are coming together for you, thanks to Mars. That job interview resulted in a real work offer. That blind date your friends dragged you to ended up being flirty and fun. The universe will continue to bring you goodies.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

As the sun prepares to move opposite your sign, you're filled with existential angst. Why didn't you become a pirate or a fireman like you always wanted? Why did you decide to move in with Larry the Loser instead of holding out for Brad the Stockbroker?

Aries March 21-April 19

Money matters are bumming you out, and you need a sexual vacation from it all. Get together with a willing and luscious someone. If you're single, consult your little black book and make some calls. Saturn says seek pleasure.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Sometimes you expect your lover to be a mind reader. But since he or she probably isn't named Miss Cleo, it rarely works. The moon is reminding you that if you crave something of a lusty nature, you'd better speak up about it.

Gemini May 21-June 21

As Mercury prepares to go retrograde, you're feeling listless and hung over. Recent romantic escapades have left a queasy feeling in your stomach. Step off the dating roller coaster and wait until the motion sickness stops.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Usually you don't obsess over money, but this week you could meet someone whose wealth fills you with lust. The moon says don't offer yourself up as a sex slave because you won't enjoy it.

Willis still a man of action

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

Bruce Willis has been taking out bad guys for more than two decades—mostly with a gun, one time with an icicle—but has stayed away from playing the villain for the most part.

Why? Because he can. And because he's perfectly happy playing the hero.

"I played a bad guy in 'The Jackal,'" Willis said while promoting Sobieski Vodka at Binny's Beverage Depot (1720 N. Marcey St.) on Wednesday. "I don't feel like I'm missing out. I guess I have fun doing what I'm doing. I get to pretty much do what I want. And I keep getting asked back."

Speaking of getting asked back, it appears Willis, 55, will reprise the role of John McClane in a fifth "Die Hard" movie. The most recent film in the "Yippee-ki-yay mother[bleep]" franchise was 2007's "Live Free or Die Hard." Willis said he hears "good things" about the script that is being worked on.

Willis wouldn't say how many more "Die Hard" films he'd like to make—"One at a time," he said—but it doesn't look like he will walk away from the action genre anytime soon. He makes a cameo in Sylvester Stallone's "The Expendables" for "about 17 seconds," as he put it, and stars in the comic book adaptation "Red," which hits theaters Oct. 15.

In the latter film, Willis plays a retired black-ops agent who is being hunted by an assassin (Karl Urban). He thinks audiences will enjoy the movie's star power (Morgan Freeman, Helen Mirren, John Malkovich, Richard Dreyfuss) and called his fight scene with Urban, who is 17 years his junior, one of the most intense movie brawls of his career.

"Contact was made," Willis said about his showdown with Urban. "It was written to include elements of mixed martial arts and UFC. It was meant to be more brutal than most fights. But we both made it through and were able to work the next day."

Besides conquering the box office, Willis has starred on a hit television show ("Moonlighting") and dabbled in music. What goals does he have left?

"Take more time off," he said. "Not work so much. Relax, travel, laugh—and eat good food."

'Shore' patrol

Another "Jersey Shore" member is in trouble. Ronnie Ortiz-Magro was taken into police custody in Seaside Heights, N.J., on Sunday. The Associated Press reports Ortiz-Magro was nabbed for outstanding warrants involving unpaid parking tickets. This comes about two weeks after Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi was arrested for disorderly conduct. On the first season of "Shore," muscle-head Ortiz-Magro was busted for punching a guy in the face. In other "Shore" news, last week's episode drew 5.5 million viewers, a record for the show.

Woody on top

Buzz, Woody and friends have taken down that cash cow of a green ogre. With $920 million under its belt, "Toy Story 3" has become the highest-grossing animated film of all time, toppling the $919.8 million mark set by "Shrek 2," according to Disney.

BABY LOVE

Neil Patrick Harris and his longtime partner, chef and actor David Burtka, are going to be parents. "So, get this: David and I are expecting twins this fall," Harris tweeted Saturday. "We're super excited/nervous/thrilled." Eonline.com says the couple's children are due via surrogate in October. Cutest dads ever!

Han-tastic news!

This announcement is almost as cool as making the Kessel Run in 12 parsecs. George Lucas told the crowd at Star Wars Celebration V over the weekend that all six live-action "Star Wars" films will be released next year on Blu-ray for the first time, the L.A. Times reports. In a press release, Lucasfilm revealed that it would be a hefty boxed set with extensive special features, including documentaries, interviews and never-before-seen footage from the Lucasfilm archives.

Duff takes a husband

Hilary Duff married her hockey player boyfriend, Mike Comrie, in an intimate sunset ceremony at a $29 million estate near the San Ysidro Ranch in Montecito, Calif., on Saturday, usmagazine.com reports. Family members and close friends enjoyed pool-side cocktails before the ceremony began at sundown. Duff's older sister, Haylie, served as maid of honor.

THE DIGIT

$35 million

That's the amount "The Expendables" fought for at the weekend box office, outgunning "Eat Pray Love" ($23.7 million) for the No. 1 spot. "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World" bowed with only $10.5 million.
